3:00	Jim Croxton – BIGGA adapting to the industry
3:30	Close

Jim Croxton, Chief Executive of BIGGA

Jim will draw the conference to a close by discussing the role of BIGGA in assisting members; greenkeepers and the industry against the challenges of climate change and other factors.

Alex Hill, former Met Officer Chief Government Advisor

Alex will be known to many as STV's presenter of weather and was the Chief Government Advisor for the Met Office. Alex will set the scene for delegates through discussing the changing weather of Scotland and what this can mean for the country in making it more resilient in terms of design.

Carolyn Hedley, Scottish Golf

‘Our changing coastline’

Our coastal and links golf courses are being impacted by rising sea levels and changing weather patterns, increasing the threat of coastal flooding and erosion. This session will provide an overview of the risks facing our courses, examples of Scottish clubs that are successfully adapting to coastal change, and the action being undertaken by the golf industry and Government bodies.

Steve Isaac, The R & A

‘Preparing golf for the climate challenge’

The extremes of weather associated with the changing climate will pose serious challenges for golf course condition and playability. This session will provide an update on Golf Course 2030, the R&A led industry initiative, which is looking to deliver research and education solutions to help mitigate the impact of the changing climate, resource constraints and regulation to provide greater resilience for the sport.

John Kemp, GEO Foundation

‘Linking it all together’

What are the opportunities and challenges you have identified, and what action will you take? This session will help you plan your next steps, how you can communicate them, and where to get help.

Stuart Taylor, Glasgow GC

‘Weather conditions, how they affect us’

Stuart will have a one on one discussion with Alison about the skin cancer issues he has faced over the years and the importance for everyone in the golf industry to protect themselves against the sun.

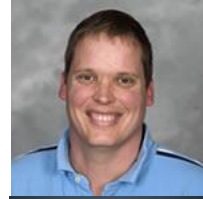

Richard Windows, The R & A

‘How climate changes greenkeeping?’

The session will describe how climate change and extreme weather will impact on the condition, playability and management of Scottish golf courses. Best practice agronomic and greenkeeping solutions will be described on how best to adapt maintenance programmes to cope with the challenges posed to help minimise the threat of deteriorating playing performance.

The Panel Discussion – What happened at Deeside?

To illustrate the devastation that can be caused by weather on a golf club, Alison will discuss the flooding and recovery process to the golf course with Neil McLoughlin (Course Manager), Debbie Pern (Club Manager / Secretary) and Frank Coutts (Golf Professional).
